Some people write memoirs about their lives. I don't need that. My family and this home will continue telling my story even after I am gone.

I am not a materialistic person and have never cared much for objects, but my house has always been a priority for me.

I would have never sold it. There were times when people suggested I do so, but I've always sternly declined. Giving this home away would have meant giving myself away.

I am so grateful for the work that Rebuilding Together Miami did so I can remain here and know that my home is safer and I will be able to pass it on to my daughter.
